Introducing AUPEC 2010

The Australasian Universities Power Engineering Conference for 2010 (AUPEC 2010) is the 20th annual universities power engineering conference to be organized under the auspices of the Australasian Committee for Power Engineering (ACPE).

The theme for the 2010 conference is "Power quality for the 21st century".

Typically over 120 delegates will attend each annual conference, with approximately 50% of the attendees being enrolled power engineering research students from across Australasia. This is the only annual power engineering conference offered in this part of the world which has a focus on giving research students, our future power industry leaders, the opportunity to present and be questioned on their research. The scope of the conference will be broad, providing a forum for university and industry power engineering researchers to exchange knowledge and ideas.

Already, both the Electric Power Engineering Centre (EPECentre) based at the University of Canterbury and the Australian Power Institute (API) have committed to supporting this conference.

Many companies and professional organisations strongly supported us in 2003, when AUPEC was last held in New Zealand, and we are seeking your continued support for 2010.
